Envisioning the Future: Science Fiction and the Next Millennium Marleen S. Barr

In this unique collection of fiction and essays, some of the best writers in the science fiction world explore our relationship to the future through the dual lens of science fiction and cultural studies, and provide a rich testament to the power of science fiction to help us re-imagine reality.

Each contributor was asked to reflect on our anxiety about the new millennium and to write about how science fiction could help us envision the far future and future cultural spaces. The resulting array of speculative writings, both critical and fictional, is diverse and illuminating—from a personal essay by Marge Piercy on love, sex and the power of fiction; to a new story by Harlan Ellison in which consumerism is the opiate of the masses; to a fictional book review by Kim Stanley Robinson which imagines what future historians will say about science in the third millennium.

CONTRIBUTORS: Marleen S. Barr, Rosi Braidotti, Harlan Ellison, James Gunn, Walter Mosley, Patrick Parrinder, Marge Peirce, Neil Postman, Eric S. Rabkin, Kim Stanley Robinson, Pamela Sargent, Darko Suvin, George Zebrowski.

Kathryn Robinson:

As a scholar exactly feel bored to reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library or to make summary for some book, they are complained. Just small students that has reading's heart and soul or real their leisure activity. They just do what the instructor want, like asked to the library. They go to presently there but nothing reading very seriously. Any students feel that studying is not important, boring as well as can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important for yourself. As we know that on this age, many ways to get whatever we really wish for. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore this Envisioning the Future: Science Fiction and the Next Millennium can make you really feel more interested to read.
