Philosophy and tomfoolery are equally at home in this exemplary new volume of poetry. These entertaining poems explore everything from love and conformity to the nature of time. Lawson stretches the boundaries of various poetic forms to create verses that are at turns humorous and thought provoking.

What's left of me?

What's right of me?

You're hungered by the sight of me.

I need what's left,

so do what's right

and please don't take

another bite. —FROM THE BOOK
