Doing Good To Thy Children: A Medical Mystery John N. Udall Jr.

It's 1974 in Los Angeles, and two-year-old Stevie Litton has the pediatric residents at Memorial Children's Hospital grasping to explain why he keeps having seizures. Jonathan Dakin, a second-year resident, and intern Cindy Watson are confused over normal blood and spinal fluid test results. The boy is suffering, and they don't have any good answers for his parents and grandmother.

But nefarious questions arise about Stevie's family. Are they as loving as they seem? If there is no medical explanation for his seizures, might there be a more sinister cause? Jon and Cindy embark on a medical and emotional investigation into this young boy's inexplicable condition and his increasingly mysterious family dynamic in an attempt to save his life before it's too late.

Author John N. Udall Jr. brings his real-life experiences to the page in this compelling narrative as these two recent medical school graduates navigate the ins and outs of pediatrics as well as their own emotional journeys regarding their careers, each other, and a dying young boy.
