Fried coffee and jellied bourbon;: A culinary guide book for autocrats of the breakfast table, containing reliable recipes and cooking instructions William C Roux

As the title suggest, this is a cookbook for men and quite a little more. In addition to over fifty breakfast menus, there are explicit directions and recipes for everything, from all the egg dishes and popovers, breakfast meats, fish, pancakes an hot breads plus a miscellany of breakfast dishes, creamed and otherwise. Roux tells us of the breakfast habits of the great and near great. One such remembers a guide who made coffee in a frying pan, another who, not wanting to drink at breakfast, devised a jellied bourbon. The book is witty, helpful and written by a devotee of the range who says, "man's best friend is the skillet". If it's for breakfast you will find it here. The book is illustrated by Larry, the signature of Terence Parkes (1927 -2003) who was a popular cartoonist from the United Kingdom. His work, consisting largely of single drawings featuring an absurdist view of normal life, was published in many magazines and newspapers, but mostly known for his regular contributions to "Punch".
