The Nations in Transition series explores the independent governments that formed after the fall of communism in Eastern Europe. Each volume surveys the nation's entire history, identifying key themes and events; portrays the social conditions, environmental problems, and political and social changes over the last few years; and offers a cautious, educated appraisal of what the future may hold. Featuring quotations from ordinary citizens, government officials, and leading intellectuals, each book provides a thorough portrait of contemporary life within a specific country. A chronology, comprehensive index, and bibliography make each book excellent for quick reference needs. Photographs, maps, and special boxed features enhance the clear and thought-provoking text. This volume presents the nation and its people as they attempt to overcome the effects of forty-five years of Soviet leadership.
